Once upon a time, Tantalus, a son of Jupiter, ruled in Lydia. He used to dine often among the gods and he was listening to their plans. However, Tantalus told these plans to men (mankind/people). Jupiter, angry, on account of/ because of, this betrayal, threw (his) son down to the Underworld. Next/Then Jupiter placed/put Tantalus near a stream of good water. Tantalus was always wanting/wishing to drink (it), but the water receded/drew back. Also good fruit was hanging down from a tree. Tantalus was always wanting/wishing to reach his hand to the fruit, but the branches receded/drew back. And fear was not ever (never) absent (away/gone) because above/over Tantalus, there was always a large/great rock/boulder.
